In this paper, a photo-thermal-electric conversion system with continuous power supply day and night and water collection during the day is proposed.

Are "night" and "nighttime" the same and "day" and "daytime" the same?

"In the day" and "during the day" are the same as "in/during the daytime". They all say that something happens regularly during the time between dawn and sunset:

"in the daytime" or "during the daytime" would be a much more natural and usual construction. I suspect this was devised by analogy with "at night" which is of course very normal.

Tandem daytime radiative cooling and solar power generation

Herein, we have successfully developed a transmission-type daytime radiation cooling system and designed a tandem structure that integrates daytime radiative cooling with solar cells.

In this study, we propose an all-day solar power generator to achieve highly efficient and continuous electricity generation by harnessing the synergistic effects of photoelectric-thermoelectric

Continuous electricity generation from solar heat and darkness

The rooftop demonstration of continuous all-day electricity generation shows its potential to harness low-grade heat from the surroundings with maximized electricity output and power

What is the difference between "during a day" and "during the day"?
